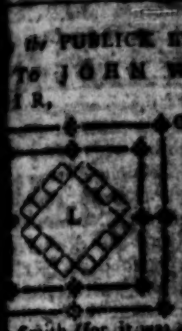
MARTLAND GAZETTE.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1772.

the PUBLICK LEDGER of October 21, 1771.

TO JOHN WILKES, Esquire.

SIR,



LORD Chatham's Prophecy is in Part fulfilled, but I trust in God it will never be compleated. You are now Sworn into the Office of Sheriff, not so much by the free Suffrages of the Livery, as by the ridiculous Interference of a private Gentleman, Mr. Robinson's confidential Letter to Benjamin Smith (for it was not an official Letter) was so effectually propagated by your Partizans in the City, as a Mandate from the Treasury, that it secured your Election, and you are now engaged in the Business of the Publick, which no Doubt you will support with Candor and Extravagance at their Expence.

There is a Peculiarity in your Fate that exceeds all Imagination, and Posterity will scarce believe the monstrous Story, when History informs them, that at such a Period one John Wilkes, a Person of the most abandoned Principles, without a single Virtue, publick or private, was, by the Livery of the City of London, advanced first to the Dignity of an Alderman, and then to the important Office of Sheriff. The impartial Historian will, at the same Time, do Justice to the only accidental Virtue you can possibly pretend to; I mean your being the fortuitous Individual of the whole Community, through whose Sides the Freedom of Election was most infamously violated. He will, no Doubt, expatiate largely on the Villainy of that Proceeding, and the Annals of George the Third, in the Historic Page, will be indelibly stamped with Reproach; but he will endeavour to palliate the Conduct of Administration by candidly confessing (if any Pretext could possibly justify so flagrant an Infringement on the Laws of the Constitution) the House of Commons might claim some Merit in expelling and incapacitating a Man, who, by the whole Tenor of his Life, had rendered himself obnoxious to God, his King, and his Country.

You are now, Sir, employed in taking the Suffrages of the Livery for their Nomination of Two fit Persons to be returned to the Court of Aldermen, for their Choice of a Lord Mayor for the ensuing Year. This Part of your Duty you will no Doubt execute disinterestedly. I do not rely on the Sanctity of the Oath you have so recently taken, for this Disinterestedness, but on the Impossibility of acting otherwise.—To act inconsistent with your Word or Oath, when your own Interest interferes, is a Practice you have long exploded. I cannot sufficiently admire the boasted Impartiality you have industriously propagated through the Channel of the News-Papers, in disclaiming all Interference in the present Contest for Mayor—"because you are one of the returning Officers." Is it really equally indifferent to you whether Crosby or Nash fills the Chair? Whatever it may be for the Peace and Prosperity of the City, it is certainly of no Consequence to you as a Sheriff. The official Duty of a Mayor and a Sheriff, though not quite incompatible, differ much in their Operations. It is your Duty, Mr. Sheriff Wilkes, to see the Laws properly executed. You are not the Promulger but the Fosterer of the Law; and, if you do not procure a Deputy, you must, with your own immaculate Fingers, fasten the Noose about the Neck of Honester Men by far than yourself.—An Occupation of this Kind is very suitable to the natural Malevolence of your Disposition; for your Conduct has fully convinced every reasonable Man, that Probity, Truth, Honesty, and the most sacred Ties of Friendship, and of Gratitude, are irreconcilable with your Notions of Politics and Morality.

The present Poll for Mayor will soon be over, and your next Duty as Sheriff will be to attend those unhappy Wretches, now under the Sentence of the Law, to the Place of Execution. Though the Publick cannot possibly reap any Advantages from any Sheriff whatever (for their Duty is limited by Law, and the Laws will oblige them to do that Duty to its full Extent, but no farther) yet on this Occasion I cannot help conceiving your Election to that Office, as an Instance of the Intervention of Providence (who sometimes makes Use of more degenerate Beings than Mr. Robinson, to be the Instruments of his Pleasure) to call you to a timely Repentance for all your accumulated Crimes. On the Day of Execution, when you are obliged to attend the Duties of your Office, let me conjure you, by all your Hopes of Happiness hereafter, or rather by all your Hopes of being Lord Mayor here, seriously to reflect on the unhappy Fate of those poor Creatures that are to suffer. Compare their Crimes and their present Situation with your own, and you will profit by the Comparison. Their Lives are forfeited to the Laws of their Country; they have been found guilty by a Jury of their Peers; they are dragged from a loathsome Dungeon, in a common Cart, to suffer an ignominious Death; and all this (oh! shameful Prostitution of Justice) for some trifling Depredations on publick or private Property. Such is the Fate of these petty Larceny Rogues; while you, whose smallest Transgression exceeds the greatest of all their Crimes, either from a mistaken Lenity, or a lucky Escape from Prosecution, enjoy the Blessings of a Life, more justly forfeited to the Laws of your Country, had you ever been brought to a Trial. Roused from the polluted Embraces of a French Prostitute (for you have long disdained the Purity of a Marriage Bed) or awakened by the Effects of an Over-night's Debauch of French Wine, you are drawn triumphantly along in a gilded Chariot, by Horses richly caparisoned (unless the ragged Mules, vulgarly called the Mob, take themselves in the Harness) to attend the Execution of those miserable Wretches, whose chief Inducement to rob and steal was, in all Probability, owing to a Necessity, arising from a mistaken Generosity, in subscribing their little all to support your Extravagance in the King's-Bench Prison; and all this Parade, and all this Pageantry of splendid Infamy (oh! scandalous Prostitution of Common-sense) is supported at the Expence of the Publick, and wantonly lavished on an abandoned Wretch, by a Junto of sturdy Beggars, who have modestly assumed to themselves, the Title of Supporters of the Bill of Rights.

Deign, most virtuous Sheriff, to glance your invested Eye at yonder poor emaciated Creature, convulsed in the Agonies of an unnatural Death. What capital Crimes has he committed? Has he robbed the Widow and Fatherless? Has he surreptitiously obtained the Property of his Neighbour, and converted it to his own extravagant Purposes? Has he blasphemed his God, and libelled his King? Has he cancelled and tore in Pieces, Securities for large Sums advanced him by a too credulous Friend in the Hour of Distress? Or has he defrauded every one with whom he had any Connection?

These self Examinings, Sir, if your Conscience is not quite callous to all Sense of Feeling, as well as of Shame, will naturally occur to you, at the melancholy Scene you are officially obliged to be a Spectator of; and Experience will tell you, that if he had even committed these most enormous Crimes, and been equally fortunate as you in escaping from Justice, instead of falling a Sacrifice to the rigid Severity of the Laws, for pilfering a few Shillings to support a starving Wife and helpless Family, the Patriots of London, as a Proof of the sincere Affection they bear to their Sovereign, and as a Reward for his publick Services, would have decorated him with an Alderman's Gown, and Golden Chain.

TULLIUS.

LONDON, October 14.

THE following is an exact State of Facts. Mr. Townsend made no Reply publickly in the Common-council to Mr. Wilkes, when he called on Mr. Townsend to name the certain Person unworthy of the Cup, who had been guilty of Collusion in the Business of the Printers, and made one of them guilty of Perjury, which ought to be imputed to him. Mr. Wilkes immediately, in the Face of the Court, declared the Assertion to be an impudent Falsehood; a Falsehood only to be paralleled by another of the same Alderman, when he went down with Mr. Horne to Farnham last Summer, on a Visit to Mr. Bellas, on Purpose to tell him that Mr. Reynolds had given Mr. Wilkes 500l. for his Interest to succeed the Town Clerk. To this, advanced in the Face of the Court, Mr. Townsend made no Reply. Afterwards Mr. Wilkes sit down in his Place next to Mr. Oliver, at whose left Hand Mr. Townsend was. Mr. Wilkes then said to Mr. Townsend, in the Hearing of Mr. Oliver, "You just now advanced an impudent Lie." Mr. Townsend replied, "You are a Scoundrel." Mr. Wilkes then added, "Set your Name to the Charge, and I will prove you a lying Scoundrel to the World." Nothing more passed at that Time, nor has since. When Mr. Townsend has settled his former Affair of Honour with Mr. Heaton Wilkes, he will, probably, begin with the Elder Brother.

Oct. 15. The following Letter, from Britain was inserted in the Reading Mercury of last Saturday, addressed to the Printer of that Paper.

"Sir, On the 22d Instant, I received a Letter (by Post) of a very extraordinary Nature; the following is an exact Copy.

Mr. Britain, CALAIS, Oct. 16, 1771.

by a Letter I rec'd a Portnight ago from a Friend in London he tells me, that you hav a going to turn King's Evidence, if You do You will Certainly be Dam'd, for You tooked the Sacrament and swore You would not tell. Now if You will promise Me to Say no More about it, I will get You two Two Thousand Pounds from Count ———, who I was with a Week agoe; You know where to write to the Count. I am Yrs. &c.

PIERRE ROGERS.

P. S. Remember me to Shey'd and all our old Friends I sent this by a Smuggling Vessel who will put it into the Post.

To Mr. Jonathan Britain in Reading Jail.

The original Letter I have sent to London, and ordered it to be delivered to the Lord Mayor. The Hand-writing I am perfectly unacquainted with, and doubt not but it is a political Trap to catch me in, but I am determined to accept no Offer whatever, but stand firm to the Cause I have undertaken. I am, Sir, your humble Servant,

Reading Jail, Oct. 28, 1771. J. BRITAIN."

Nov. 12. It is said that proper Inquiries have been made, by order, after the Pierre Rogers, said by Britain to have been the Principal in the late Fire at Portsmouth; but all the Letters from Calais, Dunkirk, and other Towns on the Sea Coast of France, import, that no such Person as a Pierre Rogers, or any one under any other Character that could be supposed to be the Party sought, is, or has been, in any of those Places.

Terrible Effects of a DUEL.

LATELY reading some very sensible Remarks on the ridiculous Height to which the French in general carry their Resentment, through a false Punctilio of Honour; which made me reflect on the many bad Consequences too often attendant thereon, an Instance of which not long since happened in Germany while I was at the Spa there. In the publick Room an English Gentleman (whose Name I afterwards learned was Musgrave) happened to tread on a French Officer's Toe, at which, though it was done undesignedly, the Officer was highly provoked, and beckoned him into the Field. Some of us followed, in Hopes of making a Reconciliation, which promised very fair on the English Gentleman's Side, who, though very far from a Coward, genteelly begged Pardon, saying it was not done intentionally. However the French Officer taken this civil Submission for a Sign of Cowardice, let drop some taunting Words, upon which they drew, and, after a Parry or Two, the Englishman was killed, and the French Officer instead of making his Escape, remained at the Spa till he was clapt into the Bastile for Life, as a Punishment for this Crime, by which his Wife, a very virtuous Lady, and Four Children were reduced to extreme Poverty. The former Part I was an Eye-witness to, the latter I have from the best Authority.

BOSTON, Dec. 30.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in another Colony to his Friend in this Town.

"I perceive that political Disputes still continue very warm in your Province. The Governor's being made independant of the People alarms you, and well it may; for it strikes at the Root of Liberty, and, if continued, will prove fatal to it. I am astonished that New-York has been silent upon this very important Subject, as the baneful Plan first took Place there. Nothing can have a worse Aspect upon the Liberties of the People; for this will open a Door to Tyranny, and all Kinds of Corruption and Wickedness.—I hope your House of Commons will continue to be warm Advocates for Liberty, and zealous Patrons of their Country, and the Rights of Mankind."

Jan. 6. Governor Tryon, of New York, has issued a Proclamation, requiring all Persons residing on any of the Lands within that Colony, heretofore claimed by the Province of New-Hampshire, to demean themselves as good and faithful Subjects. And also requiring all civil Officers to be vigilant in their Duty,—and to transmit to him the Names of all Persons who shall, for the future, be found exciting any Riot, &c. that such Measures may be taken for the Punishment of the Offenders, as the Nature of their Crimes shall require.

We hear from Pownalborough, that a large Brig which was loaded there and just ready to sail for London, lately catched on Fire, and was entirely consumed, except part of her Sails and Rigging, which were saved by cutting away her Masts and letting them fall over board.

We also hear from the Vineyard, that a Schooner from Philadelphia bound to Marblehead with upwards of 400 Barrels of Flour on board, Reed, Master, by some Means catched on fire, while the People were asleep, and was likewise consumed.—'Tis supposed this Accident happened from a Defect at the Pipe-place in the Steerage, and had got to such a Heighth before it was discovered, that it was with Difficulty the Men saved themselves.

ANNAPOLIS, February 13.

Capt. Spencer, in the Ship Isabella, of Bristol, last from St. Vincent's, informs, that on the 29th or 30th of December, the greatest Part of the Town of St. George's, in the Island of Grenada, was destroyed by Fire; that before he left St. Vincent's a Tender arrived there, dispatched by Admiral Man, to take on board what Flour could be spared, for the immediate Relief of the Inhabitants, who by the above melancholy Accident were reduced to the greatest Distress, as from a moderate Computation, not less than 200 Houses with the Goods, were entirely reduced to Ashes.

POET'S CORNER.

ODE to DELIA, playing on the Harpſichord, with her Gloves on.

WOMEN, by Nature, cruel are,
For though they all delight to please,
Yet they all take peculiar Care
In pleaſing, to be ſure to teaze:

This Truth thy Conduct, Delia, proves,
Elſe why, when lovelick Damon ſtands,
Attentive to the Strains he loves,
Rais'd by thy nimbly pliant Hands,

Why, cruel, doſt thou veil thoſe Arms
And rolly Fingers, ſting'd with white?
——Why, cauſe thus weak'ning Muſick's Charms,
Giving him Pain, gives thee Delight.
